Going Solar in Glover Park

Randy Rieland

't's not that Subir Lall hadn't thought about going solar. He felt it was a good thing to do, maybe even a smart thing to do. But it wasn't until he saw a solar company's van near his home on Calvert Street last year that he decided to get serious.

"I'm an economist by training so I did the numbers and it started to make sense," he said. "I have an uncle in California who works with a company that manufactures solar panels so I was familiar with the trend of dropping prices. When I started doing my homework, I was looking for a catch. But I didn't find a catch."

Lall chose to lease, rather than buy, the array of solar panels that were installed in one day last summer, and so he avoided paying the upfront costs. That means he also can't take advantage of the tax benefits, but he's happy with his decision. He pays about $48 a month to rent the panels.

"They estimated that my energy bills would be cut by about a third, so I figured I would still come out ahead," Lall said. "But the savings have been better than that."

The Coop Option

That's a message that Jarrett Ferrier, president of the Glover Park Citizens' Association, hopes will resonate with more people in the neighborhood. He's looking to get enough homeowners interested that they will be able to explore buying solar panels as a Glover Park cooperative. Ideally, Ferrier says he'd loved to see at least 25 percent of the homes here tapping into the sun for energy.

If there's enough interest, the next step would be an informational meeting with an organization like DC Sun. Anya Schoolman has been running that nonprofit—part of the larger Community Power Network—since 2007, when she and her neighbors in Mt. Pleasant decided to look into the potential benefits of going solar as a group.

"I was starting from zero, like a typical homeowner, struggling through all the decision points," said Schoolman. "Part of what makes it hard is that not enough people know someone who has done it. So it's not easy to find someone who can answer your questions."

That's a role DC Sun has taken on. If there's enough interest in a neighborhood, preferably 20 to 30 homeowners, Schoolman, or someone from her staff, will come to the community and lead an informational session. She explained that one-third of the presentation focuses on the technology, another third on incentives and tax credits, and the final part on how a solar coop operates.

"Even if people want to do solar on their own, our presentation is a good way for people to learn about the technology," she added.

The advantage of taking the coop approach, according to Schoolman, is that DC Sun represents the homeowners in selecting the most suitable solar panel company and handling all the negotiating.

Solar panel arrangements can be as varied as Washington's many different roof styles. This photo features a roof installed in a neighborhood off Florida Avenue and North Capitol Street. Subir Lall advised anyone looking to go solar on their own is to be prepared to shop around. Some companies don't like to work with flat roofs.

"We negotiate the same price for everybody," she said. "If you have a large property you might do better on your own. If you have a smaller row house, you're going to do better, maybe 20 percent better, by going with a coop. We negotiate the permit process, the installation, the equipment, and the warranties. Everybody gets the same price, unless you want something special."

A small solar panel system, she said, starts at about $9,000, while a larger one costs about $15,000. But federal and local incentives can lower the cost.

To Lease or Buy?

She understands the appeal of leasing instead of buying, particularly since it means you don't have to put any money down. "The biggest advantage and disadvantage of leasing is that somebody else owns the system. If something goes wrong, it's their problem. At the same time, they're getting most of the financial benefit," she said.

Lall's advice to those who want to go solar on their own is to be prepared to shop around. He learned that some companies don't like to work with certain types of roofs, such as flat ones. He also passed along an answer to a question he's often asked: No, having solar panels doesn't mean you still have power when every else's is out. It's all connected to the same grid.

all. Autumn. Call it what you will, but it is a beautiful time in our neighborhood. The brisk air and changing leaves are refreshing compared to the sometimes brutal, hazy, and humid summer months.

Hope you have been able to get out and enjoy this season. And

I hope this great season encourages you to stroll up to Stoddert Elementary School/ Glover Park Community Center on November 1 at 7 p.m. to engage with our Mayor!

Yep, Mayor Bowser asked to come to our meeting this month to get our input and feedback on how Glover Park and the city as a whole are faring and to see where and how we can improve things.

Bring along your questions, concerns, and compliments for our Mayor. You have the ability to influence the future of our neighborhood.

GPCA October Minutes

Karen Pataky

At 7:05 p.m., the meeting was called to order by President Jarret Ferrier, who introduced the remaining GPCA officers: 1st Vice President, Jack Everett; 2nd Vice President, Allen Tomlinson; Treasurer, Paul Thrasher; Secretary, Karen Pataky; and Sergeant-at-Arms, Joe Fiorillo. A quorum of members was not present, so no motions were to be addressed.

No Police. There was also no police report, due to the absence of a representative from the Second District MPD. A resident complained that police have been unresponsive to her reporting of two men living in nearby woods, but no threatening behavior has occurred. GPCA members advised her to continue to report the men's presence to the police.

MPD Annual Award Banquet. President Ferrier reviewed a prior motion to support the MPD Annual Award Banquet with a donation of $100 from GPCA funds. The motion was tabled until the November meeting.

Glover Park Community Center. Jarrett updated members on the GPCA efforts to ensure proper signage for the Glover Park Community Center, which originally included the gym, the cafeteria area, and a multipurpose room on the second floor of the school. The DC Council passed the original resolution in June 2010, but signage for the center has yet to be installed.

GPCA Website. Melissa Lane reported on her research for creating a new GPCA website. The previous website crashed several months ago. She discussed (and passed out the project prospectus for) DLM Web Development. DLM has built several websites for other citizen associations, including Palisades and Cathedral Heights. Frank Martorana made a motion to engage DLM and pay no more than $1,800; Karen Sprechter-Keating seconded the motion, but no vote ensued due to lack of quorum. The motion will be considered at the November GPCA meeting.

Federation of Citizens Associations.
Karen Sprechter-Keating and Frank Martorana, GPCA representatives to the Federation of Citizens Associations, reported on two topics that arose in recent FCA meetings. One concern was a bill introduced in the DC Council by At-Large Councilmembers Anita Bonds and David Grosso that would reduce the ability of ANCs and Citizens Associations to have standing in Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and zoning decisions. Ms. Sprecher-Keating and Mr. Martorana encouraged the GPCA to oppose this legislation. Action on the proposed legislation will be addressed at the November GPCA meeting.

The two GPCA representatives also noted that a new nonprofit, Pathways to Housing, is dedicated to providing housing for the homeless. Pathways does not demand individuals be totally drug and alcohol abstinent prior to being housed. This model has been quite successful in NYC, and other cities. Pathways offers a full array of medical, psychosocial, and rehabilitative services to accompany each person housed. Services are to be available 24/7.

Membership Report. Allen Tomlinson reported that the GPCA has 387 members, which include 258 households. Eleven residents requested membership envelopes at the meeting. Allen reminded us that more restaurants may offer 10% or 15% deductions on their bills if we ask and provide our GPCA membership cards when we enter the business establishment.

Treasurer's Report. Paul Thrasher noted that there has been little financial activity over the past several months, with the exception of $1,200 in membership fees received. A short discussion took place about the financial losses that have been recorded for the production of the Glover Park Gazette over the past three years. The matter will be addressed at November GPCA meeting when the Gazette editor is available and a membership quorum is present.

Secretary's Report. The September and October Minutes will be put to a vote at the November GPCA meeting when a quorum is present.

Improved 311 & 911 Systems in the Works

Melissa Lane

Police Report. Sergeant Benjamin Firehock of the Second District, MPD, gave the police report. Overall, crime declined for the past month compared to one year earlier but not across the board. Shoplifting and bicycle thefts are up compared to last year. Commissioner Young asked about the problem of speeding on Cathedral Avenue between Massachusetts and New Mexico. At last month's meeting, Commander Gresham and Lieutenant Neal said they would alert DC StreetSafe staff and ask them to do an evaluation of speeding on Cathedral. Commissioner Turmail also brought up the speeding problem on Tunlaw Road between Calvert and Fulton. Sgt. Firehock will check on the status of the evaluation of the Cathedral Avenue speeding issue and will address the Tunlaw Road problem. Finally, Commissioner Turmail asked what could be done to stop parents who have dropped off their children from making dangerous "K" turns in the morning at 40th Street and Calvert.

Sgt. Firehock will alert the PSA 204 traffic control officer about the situation.

DC Office of Unified Communications (OUC). Karima Holmes, Director of Unified Communications, gave an overview of her agency's responsibilities and future plans. OUC is responsible for handling all 911 (emergency) and 311 (nonemergency) calls. Yearly, average call volume is roughly 1.6 million calls to 911 and 1.8 million calls to 311. Both systems are undergoing major upgrades to address problems, most notably the recent 911 system outage. One issue is that calls that would be better addressed under the 311 system are coming into the 911 system. To address this problem, OUC is implementing improvements to the 311 system, including the ability to text requests as well as use online chats in hopes of making it more userfriendly. A number of improvements are also planned and being implemented to the 911 system, including enhancing interoperability of the system by driving it off an IP database, creating the capability for texting and sending

The next meeting of ANC 3B will be Tuesday, November 15 rather than on Thursday, November 10. The agenda will be posted at anc3b.org at least a week before and will be circulated via listservs. At the meeting, the Commission will hear from the developers of the Holiday Inn site (2101 Wisconsin Avenue, NW).

pictures, encouraging the use of "Smart 911," where citizens can set up personal profiles, and setting up a language line. In addition to system improvements, Director Holmes is increasing staff training of 311 and 911 operators and setting up redundant 911 centers, so that if one center goes down, another can take over without disruption.

Rent Control Issue. ANC 3F-02 Commissioner Shirley Adelstein was to speak about this issue, especially about concessions that can financially penalize tenants. Unfortunately, Commissioner Adelstein had to leave to attend another meeting so her presentation will be rescheduled for a later date.

Security Cameras Surrounding Russian Embassy Compound. Cliff Seagroves, Deputy Director of the Office of Foreign Missions at the State Department, explained the installation of several cameras around and near the Russian Embassy compound. Host countries are responsible for security around foreign missions. A few months ago, Russian embassy staff expressed concern about the safety of the neighborhood around the compound. They initially asked that the State Department 1) install 24-hour security posts staffed by MPD and 2) ask the D.C. government to eliminate public parking on Tunlaw Road around and near their compound. The State Department determined that these steps were not warranted but to address the Russians' security concerns, the State Department worked with MPD to install additional surveillance cameras at Fulton and Tunlaw, Davis and Tunlaw, Calvert and Tunlaw, and Calvert and 39th Street. The images from these cameras are not available to Russian embassy personnel, but are likely monitored similar to the many other surveillance cameras mounted throughout the District.

Grant Request from Hardy Parent
Teacher Organization (PTO). Jane Alexander of the Hardy Middle School PTO presented her grant application for $2,500 to enhance and update materials in the school library.
Currently, the average age of their library books dates from 2004.

A motion was made to approve the grant. It was seconded and passed unanimously.

Public Space Application for Holiday Inn Site Development. At the November meeting, developers of the Holiday Inn site will present their detailed plans and the community will be able to weigh in on these plans. For this meeting, ANC 3B was only asked to consider the developer's application for a public space variance covering landscaping and paving surrounding the site. This application is unrelated to the renovation of the building itself. Commissioner Blumenthal asked for a motion to "not object" to the application.

A motion was made, duly seconded and passed unanimously.

Resolution Regarding the Draft Statehood Constitution. Commissioner Mladinov introduced a resolution requesting amendments to the draft state constitution that will be considered by Council. This constitution is part of the DC statehood campaign. On the November ballot, the DC Council has included an advisory referendum question on whether or not citizens support statehood. Commissioner Mladinov's resolution does not take a position on statehood but proposes changes to clarify the draft constitution regarding the independent powers of a number of DC offices and commissions and asks that DC voters be given the opportunity to ratify or disapprove the draft constitution in a binding referendum if DC statehood is approved by Congress. Commissioner Young expressed concerns with this resolution and the issue of statehood overall. A motion was made and duly seconded to approve this resolution. The motion passed 4 to 1.

Good Guys Settlement Agreement.
Commissioner Blumenthal introduced a resolution to approve a revised settlement agreement between ANC 3B and Good Guys. This agreement updates, consolidates, and extends a number of past agreements, which had provisions that are no longer necessary.

"Toddy" Lyddane: An Oral History

Carlton Fletcher

Eugene Thomas Lyddane (1911-2011), who lived on Hall Place until he was 18, was a 1935 graduate of the University of Maryland, served in the Navy in the South Pacific during World War II, and worked in the clerk's office at the U.S. Supreme Court from 1956 to 1973.

The following recollections are condensed from an interview in 2010 with Alec MacKaye, for the Oral History Project of the Citizens Association of Georgetown.

When I lived on Hall Place only a few people had automobiles and we played baseball right in the street. The lamplighters would come up and light the gaslights at night. We didn't have electricity outside.

We had a Mr. Quinn, who was in charge of the papers. He lived next door to us. And Mr. Freeman lived next door. They ran Freeman's store. I remember Bob Freeman. He went to University of Pennsylvania and he was a star basketball player.

We had trolleys. We would take those down to Hall Place. Then get on the trolley and go downtown. At that age, the Naval Observatory was open on Hall Place. You could go down, all the way down [and on to the Observatory grounds]. We had also Mount Alto Hospital after World War I, and we'd go up there once in a while to see moving pictures and [listen to] the Army band and the Navy band.

General Patton, when I grew up, he was the chief man over at Fort Myer in Virginia. His daughter came to Western High and she was in my Latin class. Miss Mary Patton was a nice girl. Never saw him in person.

I used to go over to Fort Myer once in a while. It had good moving pictures over there and it was reasonable. But you had to go all the way to Arlington—drive over there by automobile.

Autumn Leaves

The autumn leaves have all but gone away, one last tall iris stiffens with the cold. What changes wait outside my door today?

The hummingbirds are gone, the sparrows stay, squirrels scamper, surefooted and bold.

The autumn leaves have all but gone away.

Black walnut limbs are bare, the bamboo sways, the air is crisp, a chill within its hold. What changes wait outside my door today?

The children are no longer free to play, they sit at desks and do as they are told. The autumn leaves have all but gone away.

This season too will pass, as each new day arises in the waning of the old.

What changes wait outside my door today?

The mirror shows my hair is turning gray, the season's turning always is foretold. The autumn leaves have all but gone away. What changes wait inside my door today?

Parenting in the Park

It Bears Repeating

he days are shortening, the holiday demands are building, the proliferation of carbs is increasing, and it all makes me want to complain, kvetch and weep. However, that danged holiday, Thanksgiving, reminds us (me) to give thanks, to be grateful.

Being grateful is a wonderful parenting tool to add to your toolbox. It's handy in so many varied and stressful situations. You are not even required to like your kid in the moment while you are being grateful. Now, who isn't grateful for that?

How This Works

Over the hills and through the woods to grandmother's house we go. The kids are complaining, loudly, in the back seat because I turned off their beloved screen. It's been five straight hours of devices. Enough!

I look out the window—so grateful that we missed the traffic. Just look at the poor people going south on 95. I am so grateful that no one has strep; I had a carload of amoxicillin last year. And now don't go saying this out loud or dwelling on it, because we know the fates listen, think we are bragging, and cut us to the quick! However, a passing gratitude can be handy.

I am so grateful no one is in diapers. And wasn't it great that Peet's coffee was on sale? $9.00 saved. And the head lice debacle of fall 2016 is winding down. And I'm grateful they love that movie Inside Out, because I can tolerate that way better than Frozen. I am grateful for Amy Poehler.

Zen and New Energy

To be sure, there is still yelling in the background, but now I am sugar-coated in grateful feelings. It's like an energy source for patience and goodwill.

Mind you, patience and goodwill aren't the same as giving in and giving up. I can certainly, with my gratitude cup filled, pull the car over until the loud complaining stops. Awash in gratitude, I do so calmly and wait quietly for the noise to simmer down to a safe driving level. (I know, too, that if I were not grateful, I'd be heaping on the shame and blame to get it quiet).

When tensions are high and the sun is low, whip out a gratitude or two, and see if it doesn't slow you down, chill you out, and get you back on course.

It's not magic; it's not the only thing you have to do. But parenting with a smidge of gratefulness is beneficial to all.

Thank you for reading to the end. I am grateful for your time.

A motion was made to approve the resolution. It was seconded and passed unanimously.

Resolution Regarding Restoring or Replacing Fillmore Arts Center Programming. DC school officials are once again proposing to eliminate funding for the Fillmore Arts Center. The Center provides broad-based arts education to students in five DC public schools including Stoddert. Commissioner Turmail introduced a resolution urging District of Columbia public school officials to continue funding and operating the Fillmore Arts Center after the current school year and seek ways to strengthen and maintain highquality arts instruction equitably to all DCPS students through similar programs in other parts of the city. The resolution was passed unanimously.

President Ferrier advised members to provide the addresses of such neighbors so that the owners of those properties can be contacted. Concerns about improper disposal of dog waste were discussed, yet again. Members were reminded that "Scoop the Poop" signs can be obtained by request from DPR.

Karen Sprechter-Keating proposed a motion to adjourn, Karen Pataky seconded it. President Ferrier adjourned the meeting at 8:40 p.m.

Save the Date! Glover Park Holiday Party

Friday, December 16, 6:30–8:30 p.m.
Glover Park Community Center

Add our neighborhood's annual party to your holiday bucket list. This fun event, sponsored by Friends of Glover Park, the Glover Park Citizens' Association, and the DC Department of Parks and Recreation, will ring in the holiday season and feature Santa, free pizza, drinks, popcorn, moon bounces, music, an Oasis (for seniors and neighbors looking for a place to chat), and more! Additional details in the December Glover Park Gazette. Questions, contact GSCMFiorillo@aol.com.
